

Une journée d'échange avec le Junior College de Neuchâtel

Mardi 29 septembre 2009

Les textes ci-dessous ont été écrits par les élèves de la classe 2B2 suite à leur rencontre avec des élèves canadiens du NJC. Les deux enseignantes, Maryam Virchaux et Fiona Girardier espèrent que vous apprécierez ces extraits en anglais et que vous excuserez d'éventuelles inexactitudes linguistiques

The Canadian day

And another thing appeared destabilizing to me, the fact that they never seem afraid to talk, it looks natural and they don't look stressed.

Lucile

For lunch we went to the Cité universitaire and we talked about things we love, like movies, music.

Stéphanie

On that day, her job was to introduce me to the NJC and my job was to live her day, such as taking part to all of her classes.

Gabriel

The third lesson was Mathematics. I understood this better than law because at school we study this subject in English.

Aurélie

She spoke slowly so I could understand what she said, and when the lessons were really boring, she lent me her computer. Finally it was such a good day because I could practice my English and meet a new friend.

Safa

The first lesson that I had was French. They did some very easy exercises and there was a very good feeling in the class.

Raphaël

In conclusion, I found this a very pleasant experience because we have learnt to develop our oral English, we tried to build sentences without mistakes, we learnt some vocabulary.

Emilie

Luckily I wasn't alone in my class ... since they were talking about Charles Darwin's theory.

Tatiana

Maybe it was so before a holiday but everyone was happy and relaxed.

Ilan

It was a great experience, because we were obliged to speak English and we met Canadian people and saw their behaviour in class.

Sarah

It was a good day, with kind people. I was impressed that the teaching was so cool.

Alan

It was very interesting to meet people who don't speak (or a little bit) French and are very cool.

Manon

The course began with an episode of the Simpson's. The film was about the theorem of Charles Darwin and the end of the period continued about this because the next day they had a test.
